Eye Tracking is the process of recording the eye movements using a detector (an Eye-Tracker). The detector traces two characteristics of the eye: the cornea reflexion and the eye pupil. Combing these two characteristics allows us to calculate the point where our gaze meets the object we are looking at after a calibration process for every individual.